RUSSIAN PREPARES FOR WAR BUT TALKS PEACE

ARMISTICE PROLONGED

LONDON, Jan. 12. A Petrograd message says the Central Powers have accepted Trotsky's proposal to prolong the armistice another month. An Amsterdam message says it is reported that Trotsky announced at Brest-Litovsk that Russia was desirous of continuing negotiations, despite the point of view of the Russian Government. The Central European delegates emphasized that the former basis of a general peace was null and void owing to the Russian rejection, and sought to intimidate the Russians by threats of resumption of the war.

The English newspapers emphasize that while Trotsky is continuing the peace negotiations, Kryslenko is organizing the army. He has issued proclamations threatening a holy war against the Russian, German, and British bourgeoisie. By Commander Kryslenko's order, detachments of the Red Guard are being formed on the northern front.

The Bolshevik leaders are of the opinion that the peace negotiations will be interrupted, and that they will be forced to organize resistance to the German offensive which they consider imminent. The continuance of the war on the old scale is impossible, so operations will be limited to defence. They hope to create a voluntary revolutionary army.

A Copenhagen message says that a Russian newspaper reports that representatives of Russia and the Central Powers have arrived in Odessa to discuss Black Sea questions, and particularly the future of the Dardanelles.

AT BREST LITOVSK.

An Amsterdam report says the Ukraine was represented at the Brest Litovsk conference.

Mr. von Kuhlmann (German Foreign Minister) who presided, complained of the semi-official Russian statements circulated by the Petrograd Telegram Agency, which he said contained an insinuation of the previous sitting, and endeavored the continuation of the negotiations. Herr von Kuhlmann added that the negotiations would lead to satisfactory results, but that it was difficult to justify the attitude of the Central Powers had agreed to refer matters which were not settled to a committee, and to conclude the negotiations on a basis which both sides had considered binding. If Russian intentions had not altered the conference would reach satisfactory results, otherwise the responsibility for the continuance of the war would be exclusively Russian.

General Hoffmann and others protested against the wireless messages of the Russian Government and its army commander, General Hoffmann, and German military institutions, and the German troops to revolt. The sitting was suspended.

Further reports state that the Russian Government at Brest-Litovsk, which had declined to transfer the negotiations to a neutral country, had arranged to meet the Central Powers at Brest-Litovsk. Also they did not desire the Entente to meddle with Russo-German affairs. The Central Powers would willingly continue the war if Russia broke up.

TROTSKY'S REPLY.

An Admiralty wireless message reports that Trotsky at Brest-Litovsk stated that Russia wished to continue negotiations irrespective of the Entente's refusal to participate, and was, therefore, willing to continue negotiations at Brest-Litovsk, and in neutral territory, because they did not desire to give the Central Powers any excuse to discontinue negotiations. He disclaimed knowledge of the Central Powers' refusal to participate in the negotiations at Brest-Litovsk. Also they did not desire the Entente to meddle with Russo-German affairs. The Central Powers would willingly continue the war if Russia broke up.

THE GERMAN COLONIES.

The "Spectator," referring to Mr. Lloyd George's speech, says: If the principle of redemption is not honestly and thoroughly carried out, we shall have a new world war. The colonies, there will be found horrors of German rule as ghastly as Belgium itself. To hand over the colonies to German rule is to hand over the world to German rule.

THE WORLD'S PEACE.

Trotsky supported the Ukrainian delegates' participation in the negotiations, and the Russian claim that the war was a European war, and not a substitution of the Russian delegation, which contained the Central European delegates.

AN INTERNATIONAL COURT.

A New York report says the United States Bar Association at its meeting outlined plans for a world court of arbitration, based upon the contract parties agreeing to submit to an international court, and not declare war or begin hostilities until the court considered the dispute, economic and military matters.

HOLLAND'S NEEDS.

The Amsterdam "Telegraph" states that the Dutch delegates have returned after economic negotiations in Paris and London. The Dutch delegates, it is stated, are willing to permit the importation of Holland of raw materials and goods specially required. They do not object to the exportation of horses, and probably cattle.

AGREEMENT WITH ENTENTE.

A Washington message states that Baron Sato, late Ambassador to the United States, has left for Japan. The day after, Mr. Mitchell, who received a major's commission in the United States Aviation Corps.

INTERNAL RUSSIA.

A despatch from Petrograd says an agreement has been reached between the Russian and Ukrainian delegates at Brest-Litovsk. The independence of the Ukraine was recognized, and the delegates decided to present a united front. The agreement was signed at Brest-Litovsk, where the food and other commodities form the chief German peace objective.

MORE HOPEFUL OUTLOOK.

The Petrograd Telegram Bureau reports that the British Government is planning to control all new issues of stocks and bonds privately owned, thus forming a financial department, and to adjust the country's finances.

FINLAND'S INDEPENDENCE.

A Copenhagen message says that Denmark and Norway have acknowledged Finland's independence.

PEACE TERMS. FRANCE'S AIMS. ALSACE-LORRAINE WITHOUT PLEBISCITE.

LONDON, Jan. 12.

A Paris report says M. Pichon (Foreign Minister) speaking in the Chamber of Deputies, stated that the French Government was in complete accord with the Allies regarding their war aims. He endorsed Mr. Lloyd George and President Wilson's views. M. Pichon summed up the French war aims as follows:

- (1) Respect for treaties.
- (2) Territorial settlement on the basis of national rights.
- (3) Limitation of armaments.

He added: "A League of Nations can only be established effectively after victory. France wants the restoration of Alsace-Lorraine without a plebiscite."

He stated that the Government had returned the fortifications to Alsace-Lorraine because they considered that it was a matter of German honor to draw French troops into the area of the Marne, and a view to causing confusion and disunion.

"When we are in possession of direct peace proposals," he added, "we will examine them in complete accord with the Allies, but we cannot reply to the proposals of the Marxist Government, which does not represent the whole of Russia."

M. Pichon said the Premier when Germany made the first peace proposal, France then responded to President Wilson's demand for a statement of the Allied war aims. M. Pichon said that the French Government then the prospects for French victory would not be so great as they are today. (Cheers.)

The Chamber, by 327 votes to 148, passed the order upon which the debate had arisen.

THE ALLIES' OBJECT.

A report from Washington states that Senator Lodge introduced a resolution asking the Senate's approval of President Wilson's 14 peace terms.

The House "Observation" committee, an inspired article, points out the fundamental agreement of President Wilson's speech with the peace terms. It declares that the road to an early peace is open.

LONDON, Jan. 12.

A message from Paris says it is reported that an enemy submarine torpedoed a British steamer of 4100 tons in the Mediterranean. The steamer sank in three minutes. The submarine came to the surface, but made no attempt to help the crew, who were clinging to the upturned bows.

EXECUTIONS IN BELGIUM.

It is learned from official Belgian sources that there were 58 executions in Belgium recently, totalling 170 for the year. They were for patriotic "crimes." The victims include two women. Three of them were between the ages of 14 and 16, and there were several boys under 20. All are supposed to have been guilty of spying. The Germans forced two girls to witness the death of their mother and father, and they shot the girls when they refused information. Another girl, 14 years of age, was charged with carrying letters from the front. She pleaded for mercy, but she was executed, and was shot while thus kneeling.

SUBALTERN'S PAY.

The announcement is to be published on Monday that the War Cabinet has decided to increase the pay of subalterns during the war to a minimum of 10/6 daily from October 1, 1918. It also decided to make an allowance for children of £2 each monthly, to a maximum of £8 for subalterns and £10 for captains and majors.

The age limit has been extended to 15 for boys and to 21 for unmarried girls.

Practically corresponding increases and allowances generally are to be made for other ranks. The Government has estimated that the foregoing concessions will initially cost £7,000,000 annually.

FOOD RATIONING.

The Parliamentary Secretary to the Food Control Department (Mr. J. R. Clynes), in the course of an interview, strongly opposed the complete rationing of all foods. The scheme, he said, would be a disaster to the country, and would drive to utter distraction thousands of small shopkeepers and caterers, and annoy their millions of poor customers. None who studied the question would commit themselves to such a foolish solution of the problem. Mr. Clynes strongly favoured an equitable distribution by means of a gradually developed system along the present lines.

The hangars are built into the ground, and are accessible by a lift, and are accessible by a lift, and are accessible by a lift.
